

The Big Fat Funny Life Gazette

Volume I, Number 001 · May 18, 2026

SHOWCASE

Why Are Cats Everywhere in Greece?

And Who, Exactly, Is Running This Country?

If you've ever stepped foot in Greece, you've probably noticed something immediately: the country is absolutely overrun by cats. Not in a scary, apocalyptic "they're taking over" way—more in a "they already..."

TRENDING THIS WEEK

How to Move to Greece (And Survive): A Practical Guide for the Emotionally Unstable)

People dream about moving to Greece all the time. It's become a global hobby. Everyone pictures feta, sea breeze, tomatoes that taste like actual tomatoes, sunsets that look like they've been Photoshopped...

Uber Eats? Cute. Greece Has Freddo Teleportation.

In America, if you don't feel like cooking, you don't panic. You don't even open the fridge to cry at a half-empty jar of mustard and three pickles floating like survivors of...

THE KAFENEIO SPOKE

No Kafeneio comments selected for this edition.

COMING UP

Coming Up

Bills, in Greece, are never just bills.

They are narratives.

You open one with caution. Electricity, water, phone, κοινόχρηστα, something from a municipality, something from a service you do not fully remember signing up for.

HAVE AN IDEA?

Send me a memory, a correction, a laugh, or something that belongs in the next Gazette.